Japan Forging Ahead in Peace

Report Discounts Danger of Economic Collapse in Defeated Nation.

TOKYO, JAPAN.—On the second anniversary of Japan's surrender, General MacArthur declared that Japan had become one of the few places in a distraught world where, despite an economy of critically short supply, there is a minimum of fear, of confusion and unrest.

He attributed this to an occupation policy in which "right, rather than might, has been the criterion" and urged that a peace treaty "be approached in the same tolerant and just atmosphere."

General MacArthur said the treaty should insure that this defeated country has the opportunity to become self-sustaining, rather than reduced to a condition of mendicancy. Japan should not become a burden on the economy of any other country, he said.

No Danger of Collapse.

Japan, he added, "is in no danger of economic collapse," and if "given a just opportunity to live in freedom and peace with her neighbors in the community of nations, there will be no threat to the survival and strengthening of the democratic processes here inaugurated under the occupation.

"For democracy, once firmly rooted in the human heart, has never voluntarily yielded before any other conflicting ideology known to man. If liberty and public morality do not bring national stability, nothing can."

A year ago, MacArthur's anniversary statement by contrast discussed bluntly what he then termed "the dread uncertainty arising from impending ideologies which now stir mankind."

Discussing the peace treaty, MacArthur said history had proved that "a people, given a fair chance, will reach the niche in human society to which their own industry, their own skill and their own perserverance entitle them, without largess from others—that largess frustrates rather than quickens the private initiative and individual energy so essential to human progress.

"It is, furthermore, a false concept which contends that democracy can only thrive if maintained in plenty. On the contrary, history shows that it springs from hardship and struggle and toil, to flourish naturally in the hearts of men who cherish individual freedom and dignity—or not at all. Material economic modity, it is neither for purchase nor for sale."

Economy Rebuilt.

Saying that there "need be no concern over fears recently expressed of imminent economic collapse" of Japan, he said the nation's economy actually collapsed during the war, and since had been rebuilt so that industrial production "has now risen to over 45 per cent of the prewar normal and the improvement can be expected to continue."

"The Japanese people, he said, "are diligently endeavoring to expiate the breach of peace for which their nation stands universally condemned, to overcome the poverty left by war and defeat, and to elevate themselves to trusted and useful membership in the family of nations."

The occupation policy has avoided "vengeance, intolerance and injustice," he said, and has "rested squarely on the fundamental concept which finds immortal exposition in the Sermon on the Mount."

Occupation headquarters posted its first prices on Japanese export goods and readily agreed with the four comments of American buyers that costs were high, quality poor, styles old-fashioned and quantities scanty.

British Gunboat Powered By Gas Turbine Engine

LONDON.—The admiralty has announced that the British navy is conducting satisfactory trials of what it said was the world's first naval craft powered by a gas turbine engine. The vessel is a 110-foot triple screw gunboat.

The engine uses oil fuel and its "motion is entirely rotary," the admiralty statement said, adding:

This obviates the vibration and certain other inherent disadvantages of the "push-pull" motion of the conventional reciprocating internal combustion engine. The engine combines the advantages of the smooth steam running turbine with economy in weight and space." A naval officer emphasized that the experimental craft was not jet propelled.

Foundling Owns Life to Curiosity of Mongrel Dog

CHICAGO. A blue-eyed, red-haired baby boy is safe at St. Vincent's orphanage because Pal, a mongrel dog, insisted on rescuing him from the basket in which he had been abandoned in an alley.

Pal and his master, 9-year-old Jack Hand, were passing down the alley behind their home when Pal stopped and began sniffing at a basket. Jack and his mother, Mrs. LaVerne Hand, called police.

Doctors said the baby, in robust health, apparently had been born without medical help about six hours earlier.

Mystery of the Missing Farms

Yep, the number of farms in America is shrinking (by a quarter-million in the last five years!). What's happened to the missing farms? The land has been taken by other farms, increasing the average size by twenty acres!

Does this growth mean farming's no longer a family enterprise? Just the opposite! More families own farms today than ever—only with labor-saving equipment they can handle more land, more work.

That's as it should be. The family farm is a fortress of democracy—where our free, American life is secure. Where every member cooperates and shares the work . . . living together in temperance and tolerance—temperance that prefers a moderate beverage like beer, and tolerance for a taste that may be different from one's own.

From where I sit, our Family Farms (and they're 96% of all farms) are something that this country can be proud of!

Longer Range for Jet Planes Sought

Important Problem Put Up to Aviation Scientists.

WASHINGTON. — The difficult problem of getting more effective range out of America's jet-propelled military planes is being wrestled with by aviation scientists.

The jets are fast but they won't go far without refueling—a serious matter for an air force relying heavily on the concept of long-range strategic bombing and concentrating most of its power in this country.

The national advisory committee for aeronautics revealed that its researchers are giving priority attention to means of increasing range by reducing drag, or resistance, of planes at high speeds.

There are at present four American jet bombers of which there is public knowledge.

They are the B-45, which is in production, and the experimental XB-46, XB-47 and XB-48. The air force says their tactical radius is more than 800 miles, speed more than 480 miles per hour and bomb load more than 10 tons.

None of these bombers, therefore, appears to have much more than half the range of a B-29 superfort, although they are twice as fast and carry a similar bomb load.

This leaves them in the category of shorter-range tactical bombers which must operate from forward bases.

If they had the range, they should excel the B-29 and other propeller-driven beavies like the B-50 and the B-36 in striking at strategic industrial objectives deep in enemy territory. Their speed would make them harder targets.

Recurrance of Ulcers Stopped by Pig Extract

PITTSBURGH. — A certain kind of pig muscle may be the answer to the recurrence of stomach ulcers.

A report made by Dr. Morton Grossman, assistant professor of physiology at University of Illinois, reveals that "excellent results" have been obtained from the use of a new drug in curing ulcers.

Grossman, who estimated that ulcers recur after healing in 7 out of every 10 cases, said he has alowed the rate considerably by using the intestinal extract from a pig.

"Out of 27 cases I obtained excellent results from 23 of the patients," he said.

Here's Chance to Buy Locomotive You Wanted

NEW YORK.—War assets administration blandly announced it had a few locomotives it would like to sell.

Persons interested in obtaining one—without tracks—were advised they could buy a steam oiler model at $1,200; two 60-ton steam coalers at $6,000 each; a 15-ton gas engine switcher at $2,200; two 30-ton diesels at $5,100 and $3,250, and a 60-ton bargain built in 1907 for only $1,250.

The WAA office also offered 10 hand-push railroad cars (aching back type) for $10 each.

Chinese Takes Eight Days To Find $1 to Pay a Fine

SHANGHAI. — Chou Chu-ju, a blacksmith, thought himself fortunate when the judge fined him one Chinese dollar in a slander case, but the smallest change he could find in Shanghai was a $10,000 note. Single dollars have been out of circulation almost two years and it now takes 400 to equal one United States cent. Chou offered the court a $10,000 note (25 cents, United States) but the judge said the fine was $1, no more. Eight days after he was fined, Chou found a $1 note.

...our costs have gone up, too!

SOME PEOPLE get along under higher prices by using less or doing without. Some have more income to help meet higher costs. All can adjust outgo to income, to a large extent.

But a railroad cannot skimp or do without and still provide good, efficient and safe service—adequate to the needs and desires of the public.

The chart at left shows why the Eastern Railroads have had to ask for an increase in freight rates. The simple reason is that the increases allowed since 1939 are nowhere near enough to meet today's costs. The revenue the railroads get for hauling the average ton of freight is only 15% more, whereas the cost of operating the railroads has increased more than 63% in that period.

Only recently, for instance, an arbitration board added another $468,000,000 to our annual bill for wages and wage taxes, of which $167,000,000 is borne by the Eastern Railroads. This brings the increase in these items alone to more than 75% since 1939.

All the railroads ask is what the law says they should be allowed to have. That means just and reasonable rates. The law says there is need in the public interest for adequate and efficient railway transportation service at the lowest cost consistent with furnishing such service.

In other words, all the railroads ask is sufficient revenue to enable them, under honest, economical and efficient management, to provide the kind of service people want.

Some examples of increased costs since 1939, affecting railroad operation

Increased freight rates since 1939 have increased the revenue from hauling the average ton of freight one mile only 15%
